Campaign to save Gordonbrock School unsuccessful

On 2 September, Lewisham's Planning Committee voted in favour of their re-submitted plans to demolish two of the Edwardian buildings at Gordonbrock School and its re-development to include a new large building to accommodate more pupils.

The Brockley Society has been engaged with the proposals for the school since December of last year when a number of parents approached us in desperation from what they saw as their lack of voice in influencing the decision-making process in relation to the future of the school. We have always regarded the buildings at Gordonbrock to be exceptional local architectural landmarks. After looking closely at the designs for the new school, which we believe to be of very poor quality, the Brockley Society decided to get involved with a campaign to persuade Lewisham Council that an alternative, less destructive development route might be possible.

The educational needs of children are paramount. This is why we employed the services of an architect who has experience of designing another project for Lewisham that also required the re-use of historical buildings to come up with workable feasibility options, and we think that our designer did a fantastic job. The proposal we arrived at retained three of the Edwardian buildings, one more than Lewisham's solution, and offered gains on teaching accommodation and playground areas. It was also a strong, but cost-effective design that we felt might give the council an opportunity to find a win-win solution. If nothing else it demonstrated that if historic buildings are treated as a constraint from the outset rather than a removable nuisance then it would have been possible to meet the

The Crown and Sceptre in film:

Unfriendly development at the Crown and Sceptre in Friendly Street

By Robert Park

Friendly Street is just outside the Brockley Conservation area but we love it nonetheless. We think that the incredibly well preserved early Victorian terraced houses on the west side of the road are wonderful and we also happen to think that our local public houses are treasures worth preserving. We were therefore very sad to see that a 'not-so-friendly' developer, who has been busy converting the Crown and Sceptre pub into flats, had started to remove the beautiful original tiles from the front of the building. Knowing that part of the planning consent for this development required the exterior of the building to remain as its existing appearance, we approached the foreman who informed us that the tiles had to be removed 'otherwise it would still look like a pub!' The next day all of the tiles had gone completely.

To cut a long story short, and after a good deal of communication with Lewisham's Planning Enforcement officers, the developer has turned out to be friendly after all and has agreed to reinstate the tiling. However, the original tiles are now in landfill so we will be keeping a close eye on the development to ensure that the quality of the new replacement tiles and workmanship is of the standard required to ensure the building is truly returned to its original state.

Memories of Friendly Street, by Harry Kippin (1916-2005)

Harry Kippin was my grandfather. He lived on Friendly Street at No.113 as a young boy, just opposite the Crown and Sceptre Pub.

The Crown and Sceptre – before . . .

The following are brief excerpts from transcripts of some of his recorded memories of growing up on the street.

'On the other side of Cranbrook Road, opposite the greengrocers' was the pub, the Crown and Sceptre – that brings back memories! It belonged to a man called Doe who lived on Tyrwhitt Road. It was very popular but it wasn't referred to as the Crown and Sceptre, it was referred to as "Old Doe's". My mother was very partial, when she felt like it, to oatmeal stout. She used to send me over there with the jug to get it, and when I was at the jug and bottle counter they used to take the micky out of me in the bar. The barman used to offer me a gherkin – ooh – was I embarrassed! A twelve year old boy being served in a pub - I wonder what they'd say about that these days?

'The bookmaker used to hang around outside Doe's to collect the bets. One day when he wasn't very well, my father who was out of work at that time stood in for him. So for a short period my father was a book "drummer". You wrote your bets on a piece of paper, folded it over your money and slipped it to the bookmaker's drummer.

'One wet day, we came home from school and outside the Crown and Sceptre was an open hatch in the pavement with big wooden doors. The cellar had been flooded and they were getting all of the barrels of beer on to a ladder and pushing them up. I remember that distinctly – a public house, with a cellar under the pavement with a large wooden hatch that you could walk on.'

. . . and after stripping the tiles

Edward Dowson memorial

Ernest Dowson (1867-1900), poet and author, who died penniless in an absinthe haze and who created some of the most memorable poetry of the 'Decadent' era, is buried locally.

Words by him which are often used today include 'Gone with the wind' and 'Days of wine and roses'.

After a year-long campaign, Dowson's restored grave in Brockley and Ladywell Cemetery was unveiled on 2 August. Over 80 people attended the rededication event.

Jad Adams, Dowson's biographer, gave a moving introduction at the graveside and read the Cynara! poem. This was followed by a memorial service in the cemetery chapel, and then a toast to celebrate his life in the Brockley Jack.

The restored grave has a new plaque with Dowson's popular 'Days of wine and roses' inscribed – a fitting memorial to an outstanding poet.

Volunteers harvest pears from a local tree

Growing, harvesting, orchard planting season nears finish

By Fran

Following the successful community planting of herbs, vegetables and tomatoes at Brockley Station to complement BXAG's flower beds, Transition Brockley / Lewisham (<http://transitionbrockley.blogspot.com>) has been trialling the harvesting of local fruit (brockleyharvest@yahoo.co.uk), and will complete its growing activities for the year with the planting (together with the Park User Group) of a small fruit orchard in Hilly Fields Park, next to the stone circle. This is planned for Sat 4 December at 11.00am, is being organised together with The London Orchard Project, and all are welcome to come along and help or just watch. Look out for details nearer the time on the Transition Brockley Blog.

The main aim of these activities is to highlight the contribution that food makes to our carbon footprint and in order to reduce this, we want to encourage local food growing and ensure that fruit from local trees does not go to waste.

Am I alone in being concerned about trees?

By Anthony Russell (Wickham Road)

Our conservation area has a fine architectural environment but do we really appreciate how important are our glorious trees to its character?

It's not just that they look pleasant but that they are paramount in filtering toxins from the air and providing fresh oxygen. Additionally, they keep us cool in summer (apparent to any commuter returning from the centre of town) and also protected in winter. They also provide valuable habitat for wildlife and reduce the amount of dust in the air. Add that to the privacy and reduction in noise pollution they provide and that's more than our best friends can do!

Yet ignorance of the basic fact that they absorb carbon dioxide and give off oxygen is apparently widespread. In a recent poll, nearly a fifth of Britons didn't know this basic fact.

In protecting our trees and ensuring new ones are planted, we are doing our bit not just for our local environment and neighbours but in a small way, for the ecology of the planet, which apparently needs friends.

So what can we do to help? If you have a garden, make sure your trees are happy. Most trees benefit from good pruning, which is likely to make your neighbours happy too. Young trees are particularly vulnerable and may need watering during dry periods and protecting during the winter.

Brockley was once an area of orchards; so if you are thinking of planting a tree, consider a fruit tree. They are usually of manageable size and of course give you free, organic fruit, which will make your supermarket less happy. But remember, neglected trees can become vulnerable to disease or toppling over. This is a particular risk for a fruit-laden tree on a slope during wet and windy weather.

If you don't have a garden, keep a watch out for trees in your area. Be aware of trees that need pruning or a spot where a tree could be planted or is missing and let the council know. All private trees in our conservation area are preserved, like the buildings, and planning permission is required before any felling is permitted. So try to keep informed of any potential abuse. The BrocSoc keeps an eye on all applications and is always interested in useful information.

Of course, it's not just the trees that benefit from regular pruning. Most hedges and bushes grow better when pruned back at the right time. With most plants this can be done throughout the growing season, after flowering. I don't need to add that hedge cutting is good exercise! It is also an art and you don't need to be a sculptor in exotic animals to add a bit of shape and variety to a hedge. This will also keep the pavements clearer and that'll keep anyone happy!

Aside from all their other benefits, the beauty of our trees should not be underestimated in making us feel good and arguably behave better.

brief for the school in full while respecting the historic fabric. We did everything we could to convince Lewisham's senior officers and politicians that this approach would be of benefit to everyone and in the process we gained considerable support for our ideas. Sadly, our Council was just not for turning and we would therefore like to apologise to everyone who has supported our campaign for letting you down. We tried our best to make the strongest case that we could – we really did, but we must now back off in order to help protect the funding for the project.

What motivates a group of people such as the Brockley Society, to stand up and create so much fuss and bother over bricks and mortar? Why are these buildings important?

Beauty is in the eye of the beholder, this is true, and we happen to think that these buildings are very attractive and enhance the visual amenity of our area. Beyond that we would argue that the school buildings of this era are culturally important, both at a local and wider level. The School Board for London, who designed and funded all school building for a 35-year period from 1870, was a tremendously progressive organisation. What they achieved in providing free education for all London children was one of the most important acts in instigating social change in our city, and it was not, as you might think, an easy task. They achieved what they did under fierce political and financial scrutiny. We would go as far as to say that anyone with working class London roots has a great debt to pay to the School Board.

The buildings at Gordonbrock are also culturally important on a local scale, as they were almost certainly constructed using materials from local brick works, perhaps even from Ladywell. These structures are an integral part of our environment, and you might say, they emerged from under the very ground we walk on.

There is one fundamental equation that does not add up. Why do we choose to destroy something beautiful, rooted and culturally important and replace it with something mundane, throwaway and artless? We don't believe that this is the message we should be communicating to our children, and this is not progress.

The Brockley Foxes latest local samplings

In the summer, lured by the bright lights of central Lewisham and rumours of a rival to Meze Mengal, the Foxes dined at the Turkish grill and restaurant 'The Levant Pide' in Lewisham High Street. Although service was attentive and the interior pleasant, the foxes felt that this restaurant will have a long way to go to compete with our established local favourite 'Meze Mengal'.

Rather disillusioned by the "big city," the next choice was to try our local take-aways and dine at home. One of our many local establishments offering Caribbean cuisine was selected, 'Nu Spice' near Brockley station, and the take-away menu was studied. Focusing on several Caribbean dishes, the menu is not extensive but the food is all cooked on site and heated to take-away in the evening.

Considering the very reasonable prices, the portions were quite generous, the individual dishes were accompanied by a good portion of rice and peas (bought separately), and some dishes included a portion of white rice (generous but a little lumpy). Oxtail with butter beans was tender and well spiced and very good, though with few butter beans. The salt fish and achee was rather too hot to taste individual spices, but generous with a definite 'home cooked' feel. The Jerk chicken was thought good and not too hot and spicy to be tasty. The large curried goat meal was pronounced excellent and very good value. However, none of the food was hot and had been re-heated while we waited in the take-away.

The foxes take-away night was felt to be a success. In the large comfortable kitchen of one of our lovely Brockley houses, ambiance, service and wine were all perfect, and the foxes felt that staying in is definitely the new going out!

Brockley's Mews

During 2010 Brockley Society has turned its attention to the many mews that exist in the conservation area. We held an open meeting in April to discuss the contentious issues that afflict them; Gillian Heywood MBE led a guided walk and historical explanation in July; during the summer we carried out a widespread survey of people who live and work in or near the mews (see below).

We have found that in some of the mews there are enforcement issues that the council, fire, police and health & safety authorities need to act on. We hope to arrange a walkabout with officials to demonstrate the dangers and irritations in the mews that cause frustration so that a plan of action can be developed.

For more information about the Mews Working Group, contact planning@brockleysociety.org.uk.

Mews Survey 2010

The results from the Mews survey which was carried out in June and July 2010, have now been collated and analysed. A summary of the findings follows.

The majority of responses came from residential users with most respondents using their Mews for leisure and taking shortcuts or for access to their gardens and garages.

Most respondents think that their nearest Mews is in a quite poor condition and there is overwhelming agreement that there is room for improvement.

The consensus of opinion regarding responsibility for looking after the Mews is that it should be shared between four groups: residents backing on to the Mews, businesses based in the Mews, Lewisham Council, and local groups.

There is most support for using and developing the Mews as a nature reserve (66%) and open space (47%), and allowing craft activities (50%), residential garages (41%) and private communal gardens (35%).

Offices are supported but with restrictions (43%).

There is opposition to mechanic/business garages (47%), residential homes (50%) and light industry (55%).

The majority of respondents like the nature aspect of the Mews.

The majority of respondents dislike all the mess, caused by things such as fly tipping, abandoned cars, poor surface conditions and dog faeces. In addition, there is also frustration over non-enforcement of regulations and the law by the council and police.

In general, the majority of respondents favour improving the appearance of the Mews and would support sympathetic development. Enforcement of regulations and law by the council and police is also cited as a means to improvement.

This survey has provided us with some interesting and very useful information, and supports the anecdotal evidence that has already existed around the Mews for some time.

'Water' Year At Hilly Fields Bowls Club!

By Ron Bias

Thanks to the Mayor's Fund, the Francis Drake Bowls Club now has a watering system, which has improved the playing surface. Also, the club received money from Lewisham Council to pay for club shirts and funding from both Brockley and Ladywell Ward Assemblies, which paid for new scoreboards and bowls and shoes for casual players. The club thanks Des Kirkland for assisting them in funding bids.

Also this season, Rachel Mooney and the Friends of Hilly Fields organised bulb planting by the entrance, Sir Steve Bullock 'opened' the new watering system, various club bowlers entered the County competitions, and ten new members joined up.

Capt. Mick 'Zinger' Singer entered FDBC into the Bromley, Beckenham and District Bowling Association and reached the semi-finals of the Singles and the Triples League, and Stan Augar and Ron Phillips reached the final of the Pairs, finishing second. Also this year, we scooped the JC League Open Triples.

The Brockley MAX taster session in June was a great success, and friendly matches against visiting clubs, a Charity Pair's competition held in aid of the Children's Liver Disease Foundation, and regular roll ups were enjoyed by members and curious casual folks.

The season ended with the club hosting the final of the Ronnie Hams KO Cup between rivals from 'down the hill' Ladywell and West Beckenham.

Anyone requiring details of Lewisham Indoor Bowls Club, including free coaching, or information of how to bowl at FDBC next season (which starts towards the end of April 2011) please contact Mick or Jeanette on 020 8291 9243.

Satellite dishes

If you want to install a satellite dish on your home in the conservation area you must put it on the roof or somewhere that is not visible from the street.

The Article 4 Direction for Brockley Conservation Area means you must obtain planning permission for any changes to the parts of your house that are visible from the street.

This includes satellite dishes, TV aerials, windows, paving in your front garden, and the front garden walls. In most cases there will be no fee to apply for planning permission.

If you install a satellite dish or TV aerial in contravention of the Article 4 Direction, the council will take enforcement action to make you remove it.

Firms who install satellite dishes will not know this and will choose the easiest position from their point of view. So check beforehand to avoid distress later.

PLANNING APPLICATIONS

Before you start making decisions on any changes to your property, we strongly advise that you look at the Council's guidelines for preserving the Brockley Conservation Area. These will give you a good idea of what is acceptable development: <http://www.lewisham.gov.uk/Environment/Planning/ConservationAndUrbanDesign/ConservationAreas/Brockley/AlteringBuildingsBrockley.htm>

If you would like to object to plans for unsympathetic or inappropriate development, please advise the Brockley Society. The more objections the council receives, the more likely the development is to be questioned. If you would like to support something, again, let us know – community pressure does actually work!

Every other week, the Brockley Society joins the other local conservation societies at the Council's Amenity Panel Meeting. Here we raise formal objections, ask questions, and give our input on local development. These meetings help to determine whether planning applications are approved or go on to be raised at the public planning meetings. The public meetings give applicants and objectors a chance to have their say to enable the Council to reach a decision.

If you would like to get involved in preserving the character of Brockley or for further guidance on planning issues, including making an application, raising an objection, or the processes involved, contact Danny on 07904 508 678.

Geddes Girls' Race for Life run

A big thank you is extended for the support to the Geddes girls Race for Life on Blackheath Common in July. The girls were thrilled to complete the 10K run and cross the finish line together after 1 hour and 3 minutes of running. The encouragement from clients on the day was much appreciated, as was the leg and foot massage from Una at Kneads Must! The girls raised almost £600 for Cancer Research UK and are looking forward to next year's challenge.
